Instructions on how to view broadcast on Access 34.1

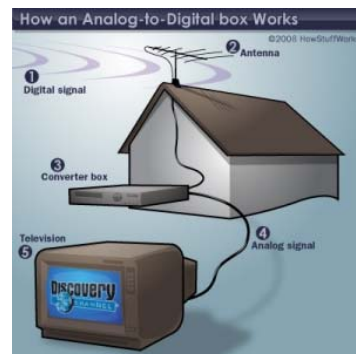

Option 1:

HD TV (Plasma, LCD, or DLP) * The HD TV must have an internal digital tuner.* Most new models come with a digital tuner installed. All you need is an antenna (~$20). Rabbit-ear amplified antennas (~$35) work better. Connect the antenna to your TV. Go to the TV Settings (Menu) and search for available digital channels. TV input/source must be set to Antenna. See TV manual.

Option 2:

Regular TV (Non-HD) requires a digital converter box (~$40 Wal-Mart) and an antenna. Rabbit-ear amplified antennas (~$35) work better. Connect the antenna to the convertor box, then the convertor box to the TV. Follow the instructions that came with the convertor box to scan for available digital channels. TV input/source must be set to Antenna. See TV manual.

Notes:

1. In some cases an outdoor antenna is required to view digital over the air channels. This can also be used if you do not want to use the rabbit ear antenna.
2. If you are a Direct TV user, some of their receivers have a connection on the back for an antenna. Direct TV also offers an additional box (~$50) to receive local digital channels. This still requires an antenna. Direct TV (1.800.531.5000)
3. Visit www.dtv.gov or www.antennaweb.org to view digital coverage in your area.
4. There are flat antennas on the market, but these are hit and miss with receiving digital signals.
5. If you are having issues, please call Eric at 817-791-2130 to set-up an appointment. ($25 service fee for basic setup this does not include the price of equipment.)

Thank you.
